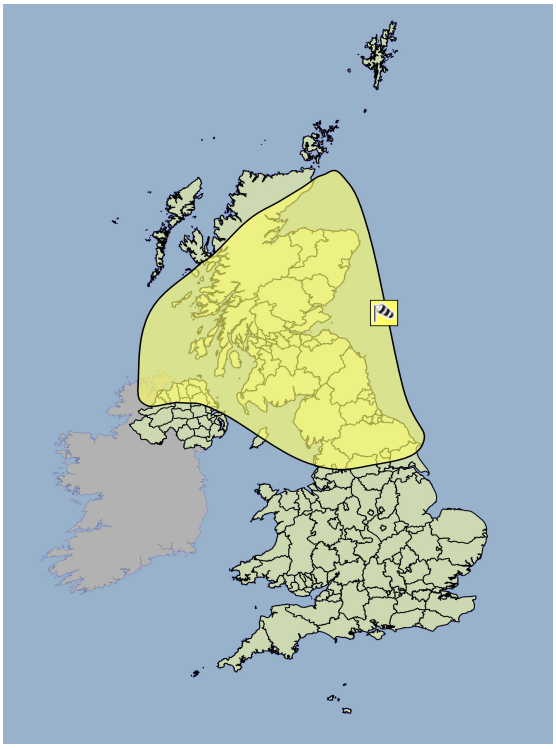
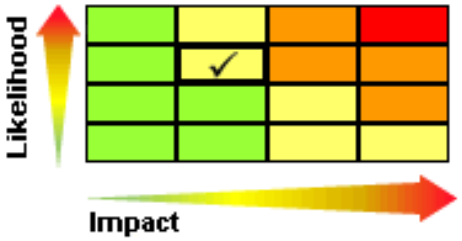
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A deep area of low pressure will develop over the North Atlantic during Sunday night, bringing gales and locally severe gales to many northern parts of the UK. Strongest gusts are likely in areas exposed to the west, but isolated gusts of 60-70 mph may occur to the east of high ground at times as well. In addition, squally winds may accompany the southeastwards passage of the cold front during Monday morning, which will bring some heavy rain as well.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Wind

Valid from 03:00 on Mon, 12th Jan 2015 until 16:00 on Mon, 12th Jan 2015

Another rapidly deepening area of low pressure is expected to move east just to the north of Scotland during Monday. Gusts of 50-60 mph are likely widely through the warning area, with gusts as high as 70 mph in western exposure, and possibly to the east of high ground.

The public should be aware of the risk of disruption to transport.

This is an update to the Alert issued on Saturday.
